Substantial opportunities exist to prevent recurrent firearm injury. Current models must expand beyond patients presenting at trauma centers with firearm assault injuries. Evidence-based prevention programs – including firearm counseling and safe storage interventions – should be adopted across a broad range of EDs and firearm injury types.